

Important notice - illegible examination scripts

All students are reminded that the Examiners place great importance on legibility in examinations.

As a result, the following policy, although not included in the 2002/2003 (and 2003) Regulations, will apply as from 1 September 2002:

Any script deemed illegible by the Board of Examiners will be assigned a mark of zero and a fail result will be given. This will count as an attempt at the examination.

The University will not transcribe illegible scripts and so a student with poor handwriting due to medical or learning difficulties must apply to the University for special examination arrangements in the usual way (see the section for 'Students with disabilities' in the Regulations).

Applications for special arrangements should be submitted as early as possible and on entering the examinations at the latest.
