Note

Accreditation of prior learning (APL) has previously been called 'exemption' by the University of London International Programmes.

APL is the recognition of previously acquired learning which can be mapped against particular learning outcomes of courses within a programme. A student who is awarded APL for a specific course is considered to be exempt from this course. This means that the student is considered to have completed the course for the purposes of progression within the programme. The mark obtained for a qualification for which APL has been awarded will not be carried forward to the student's record and will not contribute towards the award.

The University reserves the right not to award APL if the qualification of the respective professional body or institution changes after the publication of this list.

Correction 6th July 2011

Correction is made to award titles in points 2h and 2i relating to the conditions under which awards made by the University of Hong Kong, SPACE may receive APL. The amendments, which have been made to the table, are as follows:

2h.

Higher Diploma in Business (Corporate Administration and Governance):

the condition for granting APL against EC1002 is that Macroeconomics and Microeconomics (not Business Microeconomics) be passed;

the condition for granting APL against ST104A is that Statistics for Business (not Mathematics for Finance) be passed; the condition for granting APL against MT105A is that Mathematics for Finance (not Quantitative Methods) be passed.

Higher Diploma in Business (Financial Services)

the condition for granting APL against ST104A is that Statistics for Business (not Quantitative Methods) be passed.
